Friends recall Bobby Rivard

■ Many talents: Champion amateur boxer was a leader in state and local politics for decades.

By GREG ALLEN and KELLY BURLINGHAM

MANCHESTER — Funeral services begin this week for Bobby Rivard.

Rivard was a champion amateur boxer who was a leader in state and local politics for decades.

Friends and colleagues recalled Rivard as a gifted athlete and compassionate civic leader who inspired others to get involved in the community.

“He was a true statesman,” longtime friend Bobbie Stephen said Sunday. “Bobby didn’t preach. He acted.”

Rivard died Thursday at age 79 after a period of deteriorating health, his family said.

A lifelong resident of Manchester, Rivard served for more than 25 years as a member on the Manchester School Board.

He was also a member of the Manchester Highway Commission for two decades and served as Manchester’s Ward 1 alderman.

A自动

Bobby Rivard was well known across New Hampshire as a political power broker — a Republican who could make deals with office holders from both parties.

Stephen, a Democrat, said he would have liked Rivard to have made a run for office. Stephen was elected to the New Hampshire Senate in 1990 after defeating Paul Proto, who had held the seat for 24 years, in the Democratic primary.

Rivard was well known across New Hampshire as a political power broker — a Republican who could make deals with office holders from both parties.

Stephen, a Democrat, said he would have liked Rivard to have made a run for office. Stephen was elected to the New Hampshire Senate in 1990 after defeating Paul Proto, who had held the seat for 24 years, in the Democratic primary.

Bobby Rivard was well known across New Hampshire as a political power broker — a Republican who could make deals with office holders from both parties.

Stephen, a Democrat, said he would have liked Rivard to have made a run for office. Stephen was elected to the New Hampshire Senate in 1990 after defeating Paul Proto, who had held the seat for 24 years, in the Democratic primary.

Friends and colleagues recalled Rivard as a gifted athlete and compassionate civic leader who inspired others to get involved in the community.

“He was a true statesman,” longtime friend Bobbie Stephen said Sunday. “Bobby didn’t preach. He acted.”

Rivard died Thursday at age 79 after a period of deteriorating health, his family said.

A lifelong resident of Manchester, Rivard served for more than 25 years as a member on the Manchester School Board.

He was also a member of the Manchester Highway Commission for two decades and served as Manchester’s Ward 1 alderman.

A automatic

Bobby Rivard was well known across New Hampshire as a political power broker — a Republican who could make deals with office holders from both parties.

Stephen, a Democrat, said he would have liked Rivard to have made a run for office. Stephen was elected to the New Hampshire Senate in 1990 after defeating Paul Proto, who had held the seat for 24 years, in the Democratic primary.

Rivard was well known across New Hampshire as a political power broker — a Republican who could make deals with office holders from both parties.

Stephen, a Democrat, said he would have liked Rivard to have made a run for office. Stephen was elected to the New Hampshire Senate in 1990 after defeating Paul Proto, who had held the seat for 24 years, in the Democratic primary.

Friends and colleagues recalled Rivard as a gifted athlete and compassionate civic leader who inspired others to get involved in the community.

“He was a true statesman,” longtime friend Bobbie Stephen said Sunday. “Bobby didn’t preach. He acted.”

Rivard died Thursday at age 79 after a period of deteriorating health, his family said.

A lifelong resident of Manchester, Rivard served for more than 25 years as a member on the Manchester School Board.

He was also a member of the Manchester Highway Commission for two decades and served as Manchester’s Ward 1 alderman.

A automatic

Bobby Rivard was well known across New Hampshire as a political power broker — a Republican who could make deals with office holders from both parties.

Stephen, a Democrat, said he would have liked Rivard to have made a run for office. Stephen was elected to the New Hampshire Senate in 1990 after defeating Paul Proto, who had held the seat for 24 years, in the Democratic primary.
Trump and overseeing a policy decision that de- clared most of their families since that time.

Trump, who in his final campaign on illegal im- migration had promised to build a wall along the U.S.-Mexican border with Minis, was quoted in the New York Times in May as saying, "We’re building a wall. We’re building a wall." The articles mentioned the number of construction workers who had been on the site in recent months.

According to the article, the Trump administration is seeking to complete the construction of the wall by the end of 2019, which would make it the largest construction project in the United States.

The wall is expected to cost approximately $15 billion and will be funded by a combination of federal and private funds. The project is currently underway and is estimated to be completed in 2020.

The article also mentioned that the construction of the wall is expected to create several thousand jobs in the construction industry. The Trump administration has also been grappling with the issue of immigration and has implemented several policies to address it, including the construction of the wall.